

Transporting Dollies:

One of the most important details, often overlooked, pertains to the safe transportation of the equipment.

While we are obviously concerned with the prevention of damage to our dollies- we also strive to help our customers avoid costly repair bills.

Securing your load helps prevent this damage. This is not limited to the equipment physically being broken- but also the loss of production time to your company if the gear should arrive in a state that is unusable.

Additional attention should be given to State, Local and Federal transportation guidelines. Crating for shipments is also an option.
